

Remarks

The title of this divisional application has been changed as indicated in the marked-up and clean versions of the specification.

The Abstract has been corrected and amended in a minor manor, per item 3 on page 2 of the noted O.A.

Per items 4 and 5 on page 2 of the noted O.A., a substitute specification has been submitted to "the immediate prior version of the specification of record", in two versions, marked-up and clean. Underlining of added text and striking of deleted text is shown in the marked-up version. The clean version removes such underlining of added (and of corrected word spellings, etc.) text and of the deletion of the deleted text shown in the marked-up version.

The substitute specification (neither version) does not contain any new matter. This answering item 5, page 2 of the noted O.A.

Claim 3 now includes the indefinite article "a", answering item 6 of the noted O.A.

Regarding Rejections of Claims 1 - 6 under 35 USC 112, 2nd parag.

In the noted O.A., its page 4:

As to its 1st parag., amended claim 1 now recites -- from a cocked position to -- .

As to its 2nd parag., "its" and "it" no longer are recited in this or any other pending claim.

As to its 3rd parag., as pointed out below under Remarks, claim 1 (and its depending claims) is not directed to claiming an apparatus. It is submitted that claim 1 is no longer to be considered as indefinite in its amended format below as well the re-formatted depending claims 2 - 6 .

As to its 4th parag.,

ii) "standard" is defined as: - - 7. any upright object used as a support, often a part of the thing it supports; supporting piece; base; stand. Page 1421, College Edition, Webster's New World Dictionary of the American Language, 1957, The World Publishing Company.

BEST AVAILABLE COPY

As to amended claim 3, Strong does not teach a linkage in the solenoid means and which connects a rod to an arm.

As to amended claim 4, Strong does not teach a standard at all, nor a threaded stem, latch means and handle means in the combination recited in the claim.

As to amended claim 5, Strong does not teach the elements of the stem recited in this claim - threaded sleeve and ledge.

As to amended claim 6, Strong does not teach a bearing means that is a roller.

Wherefore, it is submitted that the application is now in a condition for Allowability and Allowance, passage to which is hereby earnestly solicited.

Respectfully,

Frank L. Zugel

Frank L. Zugel

Atty of record

Reg. # 19562

ph and fax: (818) 769-3411

ST AVAILABLE COPY